

EU LITIGATION

Sometimes, your opponent will not be willing to settle an issue politically. Wrong decision. Our reputation as trial lawyers before the European Court of Justice (ECJ) is well known. When we appear in a case, our opponents know that they are facing an adversary that has the willingness and capability to see the matter through to verdict and to win. This is a rare capability in the present lobbying environment. And often, this threat is enough to enforce a solution.

It is no secret that most business litigators, especially at major “full service” law firms, have no significant ECJ trial experience. Non-legal lobbying firms have no such experience at all. But at trial, a client’s net worth may be in play. It’s winner-take-all, and disasters can happen. It’s not a time for learning on the job. Unlike most business litigation firms, we go to ECJ trial – often. Frequently, at the eleventh hour, just before trial begins, we are brought in to assist or replace existing counsel and try the case.

We have carefully handpicked our lawyers one at a time in order to form a team of lawyers with outstanding experience in EU Litigation. Their work includes virtually every type of business or institutional dispute before the ECJ, from patent and copyright to securities, from arbitration to antitrust, from employment to trade. We represent international institutions, major corporations and mid-size companies, including high technology, entertainment, media, aerospace, defense, banking, computer, software, real estate, construction, securities, and insurance.

Opposing lawyers know that we know how to win at trial. That reduces the “hold up” factor and enables us to achieve solutions others cannot. We believe we have one of the best groups of ECJ trial lawyers in the EU. Our lawyers have tried hundreds of ECJ cases, gaining their experience as ECJ litigator, official representative of the European Commission before the ECJ, or as Advocate General at the ECJ itself. Our track record speaks for itself.
